Another Product From Sugar Cane

BAGASSE OF SUGAR CANE BEING USED TO MANU-FACTURE PAPER—ALL GRADES PAPER CAN BE MANU-FACTURED—PREDICTED THAT NEW USE WILL BE BETTER THAN SUGAR MAKING.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 4.—Samples of the paper made from the bagasse of sugar cane, turned out under government supervision at the Cumberland Mills, Portland, Me., have been received here by Captain D. G. Purse, president of the Interstate Sugar-Cane Growers' Association. The paper is made in several grades, and is of a quality that will make its use possible for almost everything for which any kind of paper is demanded. The samples range in grade from paper thin enough to be used for cigarette wrappers to that of a thickness and toughness sufficient for the heaviest wrapping paper. As the paper can be made perfectly white, and is capable of receiving a fine finish, it can be used for making the finest of stationery as well as for the commoner uses. As has already been stated, another recent product of bagasse is a sort of tough cardboard that closely resembles leather and which, it is believed, will prove a cheap but valuable substitute for that material in a number of industries.

What the success of the experiments in paper-making means will become apparent when it is known that bagasse has hitherto been an absolutely waste product, cane-grinders burning as much of it as they could and carrying the remainder anywhere to get rid of it. It is believed that the possibilities of the material as a basis for numerous articles of value in daily commerce will become so developed in a short time that it may prove profitable in the near future to grow cane for the bagasse alone, without considering the value of the syrup and the sugar.
Many of these possibilities will be shown at the second annual convention of the Interstate Sugar Cane Growers' Association, to be held in Jacksonville this week.

One of the matters that will be brought before the convention for discussion will be the importation of a cheap molasses and the selling of it in competition with the best of Georgia syrup. This molasses, which is brought from Antigua, one of the Lesser Antilles, is taken chiefly in Boston, though it is also brought to the South, in fact, cargoes of it are disposed of in Savannah. Delivered, it costs the dealer from twenty-six to twenty-seven cents a gallon, as high a price as that paid for Georgia syrup. The effects of this convention will be far-reaching.

WHAT ADMIRAL SKRYDLOFF SAYS

BUT THIS WAR BEFORE THE JAPANESE LOCKED UP HIS FLEET AND BEFORE PORT ARTHUR WAS CUT OFF FROM COMMUNICATION WITH THE REST OF THE WORLD.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Echo de Paris reports Admiral Skrydloff as saying to him:

"I shall arrive at Port Arthur without a definite plan, leaving circumstances to dictate the activity of the squadron I shall command. I shall begin by minutely inspecting the warships which we still have, and which we must keep at all costs. I am determined to surround myself with young men. That is why I have taken as my chief of staff a mere commander, Stienke, and have not heeded the tradition of selecting a rear admiral.

"I realize that Russia expects much of me. It is thought that I shall after the terrible disaster to the Petropavlovsk, our squadron at Port Arthur is greatly reduced, and I must first confine my efforts to getting everything in order. I shall make no sorties. I might add another glorious page to Japan's history by sending out my few ships to be sunk, but I shall not give them that pleasure. I intend jealously to preserve my ships for a great occasion. I doubt whether the Baltic squadron will be at Port Arthur in time, for I think when it is ready to start events will already have been accomplished which will render its presence useless."

Asked whether he did not fear that the Japanese would surround Port Arthur, Vice Admiral Skrydloff said:

"If the Japanese try to land troops and cut the land communications, so much the better. General Kuropatkin has foreseen that possibility and will be able to dislodge them. We want nothing better than landings en masse, so that the battles will be the more decisive.

"I have put on visiting cards both Port Arthur and Vladivostok, for I shall be going backward and forward between the two places."

The Figaro has published an interview with Vice-Admiral Skrydloff. The admiral is quoted as saying:

"I believe in offensive tactics. It is necessary to push ahead and take the initiative instead of letting the enemy keep us in a state of unrest. It is essential to keep him in a state of unrest. It is necessary to invite a combat and take chances. Any commandant who awaits his enemy is practically at his enemy's mercy. But aggressiveness does not mean imprudence. Wisdom must go with boldness, but it is evident that to be aggressive does not mean the same thing for the Russians as for the Japanese at Port Arthur, since the latter have more ships than the former."

WAILUKU CORNER STONE LAYING

PLEASANT EXERCISES AT THE NEW SCHOOL BUILDING IN COURSE OF ERECTION THERE.

WAILUKU, May 21.—The exercises in connection with the laying of the corner stone of the new school this morning, was very largely attended.
Long before the hour of commencement a large number of people were present at the school site. Children from Paia and Hamakua, in charge of their respective teachers attended in bodies, making the procession a very nice scene. Shortly after the hoisting of the American and Hawaiian flags, the Wailuku band struck up the Star Spangled Banner, everybody rose, the gentlemen keeping their heads uncovered. Mr. King's opening address and greetings from the department of Public Instruction was well rendered.
H. W. Baldwin was heard for the first time in public. "The Two Grenadiers" being well rendered by him accompanied on the piano by Miss Lewwhite. Mr. Baldwin has a strong baritone voice.

The corner stone was then laid followed by remarks by Hon. H. P. Baldwin. Mr. Baldwin declared the corner stone of the Wailuku school house well and truly laid. He then reviewed the history of education in these islands, laying special stress on the fact that while the attendance at present in the schools of the Territory is only about 18,000, yet the expenditure for maintaining public schools is very large considering the limited revenue of the Territory. He stated that long ago Hawaiian chiefs used to compel the natives of these islands to go to school, whether young or old, and at that time the attendance was about 50,000. The other numbers in the program were successfully rendered, closing with "Hawaii Pono!" by the audience. A very large number of people from the country districts were present, expressing themselves as well satisfied with the function. The children then repaired to the old school building, where soda and cake were served by the refreshment committee of the Improvement Association of Wailuku district. W. A. McKay was master of ceremonies for the day, and on behalf of the Improvement Association of Wailuku District offered three cheers for the new school, which was generously responded to.

The following is the program:
Star Spangled Banner.....
Wailuku Brass band.
Invocation.....Dr. Beckwith Hawaiian Song.....Quartet Opening Address and Greeting.....
C. E. King
Vocal Solo.....H. W. Baldwin Laying of the Corner Stone and address.....H. P. Baldwin

"Hawaii Pono!"
On the stone were carved the words
"May 21, 1904. Laid by Hon. H. P.
Baldwin."

There is a man in Ottawa, Kau, who advances the theory that cyclones wreck houses by getting inside them and bulging the walls out. Perhaps he thought a cyclone was the display of a wife's temper.
